

Exploring patents

Minesoft and RWS announce new analysis tools and enhancements to visualisation of patent data in PatBase

Family Explorer

PatBase offers patent data organised into patent families, a great time-saver. Now, PatBase contains a new viewing option –to drill down to individual patent publications and view the information related solely to each individual publication, offering the ability to analyse a patent family more closely.

Priority Maps

Relationships between patent family members can be difficult to track. The bigger the patent family, the harder this task becomes. Minesoft and RWS have added a new visualisation tool called “Priority Maps” to PatBase that overcomes this problem, creating a clear, concise picture of the various relationships. With over 30 million patent families in PatBase, this will help today’s patent professionals to check and analyse patent data. Internal and external data resources are consulted and results are consolidated in real-time, including the European Patent Office OPS service.

Keyword Highlighting Options

Advanced options to add keyword highlighting of selected words, groups of words or phrases (concepts) when viewing full-text patent documents have been added to PatBase. The new Highlighting visualisation tool has been carefully developed to work systematically and logically, capturing grammatical stemming possibilities of English words. A concise hit map overview shows exactly where each concept appears in the full-text document, which may be very long, and enables users to jump quickly from one occurrence to another, saving time spent reading through and analysing search results.

Publication Report option in CSV format

Individual publications (patent family members) can be exported in CSV format, for further analysis.
